

CURRICULUM VITAE

André Biscaia

Born 17/04/1965, Lisboa, Portugal.

PhD in International Health, specialty of Health and Development Policies, Instituto de Higiene e Medicina Tropical da Universidade Nova de Lisboa (2010) [Institute of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine of the Nova University of Lisbon], with the thesis "Satisfaction at Work of Family Physicians of the Portuguese Health Centers".

Medical Specialty of General and Family Medicine (1996).

Medical Doctor graduate at NOVA Medical School|Faculdade de Ciências Médicas da Universidade Nova de Lisboa [Nova University of Lisbon] (1990).

I am a family physician with a special interest in health services research, education and training. I have been active in student and then professional and civic associative movements - professional and scientific associations, trade unions and NGOs.

I have also been involved in research since medical school. Some projects had national scope (one with 8 editions) and the majority is published as papers, book chapters, books or reports.

I have recently started to work as advisor to the Board of Directors of the Administração Regional de Saúde de Lisboa e Vale do Tejo [Regional Health Administration of Lisbon and Tagus Valley] in parallel with my clinical activity.

Translating research into practice and its usefulness have always been essential to me. My main research topics include health systems pivotal areas: job satisfaction, contractualization /commissioning and service evaluation, health systems macro to micro organization, human resources planning.

See more at <https://www.linkedin.com/in/andre-biscaia-56a46245/>